

The Premier League Opportunity

How acquiring EPL rights in 2027 transforms FanCode from India's niche sports platform to its #2 streaming giant

THE PROBLEM

FanCode is invisible to the audience that matters most

PROBLEM 01

Brand Invisibility

~73%

of Indian sports fans cannot name FanCode unprompted

mass-market campaigns targeting casual sports viewers

vs

Hotstar = cricket. JioCinema = IPL.
FanCode = nothing to most

PROBLEM 02

No Mass Anchor Content

LaLiga

F1, MotoGP — premium but niche. Serves superfans only

380M

cricket fans in India — none actively choosing FanCode

FanCode content moments go viral or trend nationally

Root cause: FanCode has no content that makes a casual fan stop, watch, and return.

One solution. Two problems solved.

EPL rights = mass anchor content + instant brand recognition. One bid. Two problems solved simultaneously.

PROBLEM FanCode invisible to 140M+ Indian football fans ACTION Map audience: age, city, content habits, willingness to pay OUTPUT ICP: Urban 22–35, football-aware, no streaming subscription yet	PROBLEM No content drives mass awareness or habit formation ACTION Audit content levers — EPL vs other leagues vs original content OUTPUT EPL wins: 3.2B global viewers, viral moments, fastest growing fanbase in India	PROBLEM 2027 rights bid needs audience proof + financial case ACTION Phase 1: free EPL highlights, football community, influencer partnerships OUTPUT Arrive at 2027 bid with 10M+ football fans already on FanCode	PROBLEM Convert rights into revenue, retention, and brand equity ACTION ₹99 football pass + FanCode Shop EPL merch + premium brand advertising OUTPUT FanCode = India's football home. Impossible for Hotstar to pivot fast enough.

Why EPL — and not another league?

01

Most watched league globally

3.2 billion cumulative viewers per season across 188 countries. India's urban markets index highest for EPL viewership outside UK.

03

FanCode already has LaLiga

EPL is the natural next step. LaLiga builds credibility with hardcore fans. EPL builds mass. Together = India's definitive football home.

02

Social media virality built-in

EPL clips, highlights and memes dominate Indian football Twitter, Instagram and YouTube — organic reach money cannot buy.

04

Rights renewal window: 2027

Hotstar's current EPL deal expires in the 2026-27 cycle. FanCode has 12-18 months to build audience before the bid opens.

Who FanCode needs to own

The Urban Football Fan

Age: 18-30 years · Mumbai, Delhi, Bengaluru, Kolkata, Kerala, North East.

- Watches EPL highlights on YouTube daily
- Follows clubs on Instagram
- Never paid for football subscription
- Will pay if content is premium + seamless

Est. 60–80M potential users

The Casual Sports Scroller

Age: 35+years · Tier 1 + Tier 2 cities

- Doesn't actively follow football
- Engages with viral moments — Salah, Haaland
- Currently on Hotstar for cricket only
- Can be converted with right triggers

Est. 40–60M convertible users

How FanCode wins the football audience before the 2027 bid

Phase 1

Now → Late 2026

Build the Audience

Free EPL highlights on app · YouTube football content · Social media football community · Partner with football influencers in Kerala, Bengal, Goa

Phase 2

Mid–Late 2026

Build the Case

Use audience data to justify EPL bid · Leverage LaLiga relationship with European leagues · Approach broadcasters, prepare ₹200–300Cr bid

Phase 3

2027 Season

Win and Own

Exclusive EPL streaming · ₹99/month football pass · City campaigns: Mumbai, Kolkata, Bengaluru first · EPL club merchandise via FanCode Shop

How this pays back

Subscription Pass

₹99–
199/mo

Football-only pass. Lower entry than Hotstar's ₹299.
Targets price-sensitive 22–28 age group. Easy upsell to annual plans.

Advertising Revenue

High CPM

380 EPL matches = 380 ad windows per season.
Premium brands pay premium for football-watching urban 25–34 demographic.

Merchandise — FanCode Shop

High margin

Official EPL club jerseys and accessories. FanCode Shop already exists — EPL rights = legitimate merchandise opportunity worth ₹100Cr+.

Fan Data Monetisation

Strategic

Football fan behavioural data is valuable to brands, clubs, and advertisers. Builds FanCode's analytics moat over time.

Conservative estimate: 5M subscribers at ₹99/month = ₹495Cr annual recurring revenue — before advertising or merchandise.

Why FanCode beats Hotstar for football — if they move now

	FanCode (with EPL)	Hotstar	JioCinema
Cricket rights	Strong	Dominant ✓	Strong (IPL)
Football rights	Dominant ✓	Weak (expiring)	None
Football UX	Built for it	Cricket-first	Cricket-first
Price for football	₹99 pass	₹299 bundled	No football pass
Merchandise	FanCode Shop ✓	None	None
Brand recall — football	Ownable	Not their identity	Not their identity

What could go wrong — and how to mitigate it

RISK: Hotstar overbids for EPL rights in 2027

→ Build football audience and alternative IP (UEFA Nations League, FA Cup) as hedge. LaLiga viewership data = negotiating proof of demand.

RISK: Low EPL awareness outside metro cities

→ Phase 1 community building in Kerala, Bengal, Goa — India's football heartlands — before metro push. Bottom-up strategy.

RISK: High rights acquisition cost strains budget

→ Pre-commit advertising deals with brands before bid. Reduces financial exposure. Merch revenue projection justifies investment.

RISK: User acquisition cost exceeds projections

→ Football fan community already organic on social. Content marketing over paid ads keeps CAC low. Influencer partnerships compound.

THE RECOMMENDATION

FanCode should move now.

Not in 2027 when the bidding war starts.

Now — while the football audience is completely uncontested territory.

- Launch a dedicated football tab with free EPL highlights on the FanCode app immediately
- Build an organic football content community across Instagram, YouTube and X — before spending on rights
- Use LaLiga viewership data to construct the financial and strategic case for the 2027 EPL bid
- Bid for Premier League rights in the next cycle and position FanCode as India's football home permanently
